

Resources: Health Care for Adults with Cerebral Palsy

During childhood, there are many hospitals, clinics, and specialty centers familiar with cerebral palsy and other disabilities, but once you hit adulthood it can be hard to find medical professionals who are familiar with the unique needs of individuals with disabilities.

While there are several clinics throughout the country that offer a range of services for adults with disabilities (and an approach to health care that acknowledges the importance of understanding disability, but not at the expense of a holistic view of health) transition from pediatric to adult care can be overwhelming, and often times individuals are left with little information to begin their search.

The following guide features healthcare facilities throughout the United States that specialize in treating adult with cerebral palsy and other disabilities. Please note that this list of facilities, as well as the list of specialties they offer, are not necessarily exhaustive. If you know of an organization that should be added to the guide, please let us know by emailing info@ucp.org.

Additionally, the American Academy for Cerebral Palsy and Developmental Medicine \(AACPD\) has a database of medical professionals familiar with cerebral palsy and the National Association for the Dually Diagnosed \(NADD\) has a consortium of mental health professionals who are familiar with treating individuals with a dual diagnosis of ID/DD and mental health-related conditions.

Lastly, each facility has its own guidelines and restrictions on the treatment they offer and our listing may be subject to change. Please contact them directly to confirm their available services and your individual needs.

Special thanks to Tanya Katak for her work in helping to create this guide.
